

How do I become a member?

Engineers Ireland represents all disciplines and all members of the engineering profession. We take pride in the fact that each applicant is considered on an individual basis. There is a route of application for every member of the engineering profession and we will take both your qualification and work experience into consideration when assessing which is the best route for you.

Applying for membership is easy – there are a number of membership streams

* For those graduating before 2013 ** For those graduating from 2013

Other membership categories are:

- STUDENT MEMBER – If you are an undergraduate currently studying an engineering programme.
- AFFILIATE – If you are not currently eligible for membership but you are associated with the engineering profession by virtue of your employment in an engineering role.
- COMPANION – If you have attained a senior position in a profession other than engineering and would like to join Engineers Ireland.

We shape your future
